

her companion on entering the chamber were received with a profusion of shampooing. The large Myrmicas, though sadly crowding the occupants of the little chamber, let themselves

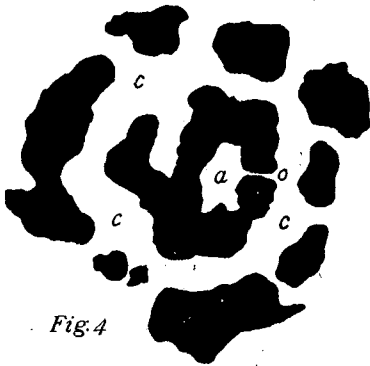

Fig. 4

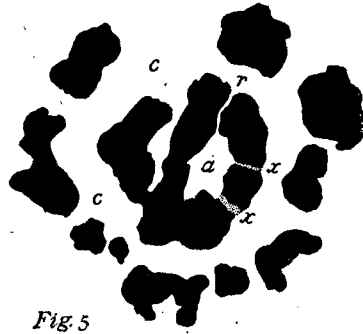

Fig. 5

Fig. 6

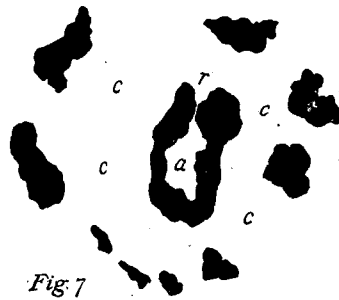

Fig. 7

Fig. 8

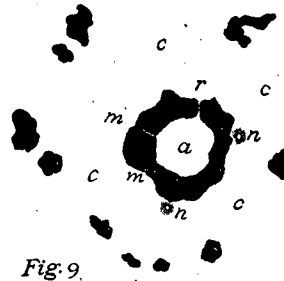

Fig. 9.

FIGS. 4-9. — Nest of Leptothorax emersoni n. sp., within the nest of Myrmica scabrinodis Nyl.

brevinodis Emery down comfortably and appeared to experience all the sensuous satisfaction of a couple of jaded roués who have dropped into a Turkish bath for the night. The naturalist of a past generation would probably have interpreted the behavior of Leptothorax