

eyes and teeth of mandibles black. Body clothed with sparse scattered macrochètes or bristles, more numerous on head and gaster; there are three pairs on the pronotum, one pair on the mesonotum, and two pairs on the epinotum. The number of these bristles in some specimens appears to differ on the pronotum and epinotum, or they may have been broken off, but in every case there is only one pair present on the epinotum. A fine silky yellowish white pubescence occurs on the head and thorax.

Fig. 2.

- (a) Maxillary palpi of (Paratrechina) (Paratrechina) longicornis Latr.
 (b) " " " " (Nylanderia) jægerskyöldi Mayr.
 (c) " " " " (Parapatrechina) pallida, sp. n.

Head round oval, longer than broad, narrowed in front and behind, posterior angles rounded, posterior border slightly excised, viewed in profile the head is rounded above, highest after insertion of antennæ, and somewhat concave beneath; cheeks rounded; mandibles long, narrow, crossed when closed, masticatory border armed with four teeth, the apical one long and sharp, the one next to it small and narrow, the two behind that a little broader and longer; clypeus rather large, transverse, convex, anterior border slightly rounded, posterior border angled in middle; clypeal fovea not joined to