

border armed with a number of small sharp teeth, the second and fourth being longer than the third; clypeus fairly large, anterior border excised in middle, posterior border extending in a point between the frontal carinae; frontal area small but distinct; frontal carinae short, low, fairly wide apart, parallel; eyes large, round, rather prominent, situated in front of sides of head; antennae 12-jointed, scape long, extending beyond posterior border of head, funiculus with first joint longer than third, second joint the shortest, rest of joints gradually increasing in length and breadth, last joint as long as the two preceding taken together. Thorax with a neck, longer than broad, constricted in middle, broadest at humeral angles; pronotum large, transverse, convex, anterior border margined, posterior border semicircular encircling mesonotum; mesonotum shorter and narrower than pronotum, a little longer than broad, slightly convex; sutures between pro- and mesonotum and meso- and epinotum well marked, especially the latter; epinotum with angle between dorsal surface and declivity well marked, declivity abrupt, somewhat flat, considerably longer than dorsal surface. Petiole narrow, flat, slightly longer than broad, scale entirely rudimentary; gaster oval, overhanging the petiole, pointed at apex, fifth segment extending a little beyond the fourth, cloacial opening terminal. Long. 2.5 mm.

Described in honour of my cousin Primrose Griffiths (née Donisthorpe), who has always taken an interest in my work, from sixteen workers. Mauritius on Le Pouce Mt., November 2nd, 1948, nesting in a dead tree stump (R. Mamet).

No. 127. Strumigenys (Cephaloxys) raymondi Donisthorpe, Ann. Mag. Nat. Hist. (11) xii. p. 779 (1945), 1946.

10 ♂♂. "In decaying wood." Le Pouce Mt., Mauritius, November 2nd, 1948 (Mamet).

No. 128. Brachymyrmex cordemoyi Forel, Ann. Soc. Ent. Belg. xxix. p. 49 (1895).

21 ♀♀, 3 winged ♀♀. "Nesting in dead tree stump." Le Pouce Mt., Mauritius (Mamet), November 2nd, 1948,