

this hypothesis, although the considerable variation they show may fall into line when better material comes into evidence. Everything considered, it seems likely at this time that montigena should pass into the synonymy of dakotensis; at least, the burden of proof should fall on those who wish to maintain montigena as an independent taxon.

Change of Policy on Separates

Greatly increased production costs have finally made necessary a change in policy as regards separates of articles in ENTOMOLOGICAL NEWS. Faced with a choice of having the printer almost double the prices on reprints purchased by authors, or of ourselves paying the costs of the 25 gratis copies furnished, we have decided on the latter course. We shall continue the old custom of accepting suitable articles from any author, and will publish these without cost to the author. However, the author will not be entitled to the usual 25 gratis separates unless he is a member of our Society. Every author may, of course, order reprints from the printer, and the prices of these are very reasonable considering present day costs and the high quality of the work.

Anyone, whether member or not, ordering 50 or more reprints will no longer receive an additional 25 copies gratis. We stress this detail so that authors may be informed, and will order the total number of reprints that they need. The cost of the 25 heretofore added to the order is actually very small, and will hardly be felt by the author. Not providing them will simplify procedures for the printer who will then not have to bill us for these few extras for every author each month.
